Love God's way

August 2013

I have decided to write this without quoting any scriptures. If you are interested in studying the subject matter, then pick up the bible or go on to the bible on the Internet and search for love. My aim is to write from the heart. First time I heard about agape love, I was stunned to disbelief. I could not understand why God would love me or made all these intricate plans to save me. I could not understand why Jesus died for me while I was still a sinner. How could God love me unconditionally? Does he know me? I thought stupidly LoL.

In order to understand, you will need to explore the nature of God. His very essence is love. Everything he does is motivated by love and even some of what we might term controversial acts are all motivated by love. Love gives and so Gods gives life, creates, builds, increases and multiplies. He made man in his image and gave him a bit of himself, Zoë. -That is why we are always behaving like him; creating, building, multiplying, increasing. When we don't do this we feel like something is wrong. When you don't give or receive love, you feel like something is wrong.

The day I received his love into my heart, I felt like a new person. I felt like I was born again. My heart connected with his and my whole essence took on another persona. I was at peace with myself and it was as if all the fight in me was gone. Things just took on a whole new meaning. The first thing I wanted to do was to give. I wanted to tell somebody how to get this experience; I wanted to give somebody this love I just got. The more I understood Gods love, the more I was in awe. I could not judge anyone harshly and was more patient with people around me. I thought a lot about other people and that was new to me.

This 'surreal' feeling was shattered by some 'awkward people' in my world. My mother was not like most mothers and struggled to show love. She loves me but just didn't know how to show it. That was tough. Then I had a few other people that made entry into my world that was so difficult to love. This was a struggle for me but his word guided me to love them anyway. This was a different experience for me. I practised and failed sometime but I persisted. Love won in the end.

Love is a state of being that completely forgets self and wraps itself to another. It totally consumes both of you that you are lost to the elements. You are happy in this bubble feeding off each other and off God. It gives and never stops giving. Love will outlast almost all things and I was astounded but not surprised when God rated it above hope and faith. If Faith is hope realised and it's impossible to please God without faith, then love is the key to connecting to God and realising all you hoped for.

You may not agree with me on what is written here but I invite you to try Gods love today. This is different from just being born again; this is about surrendering to his love and allowing it to consume you. I assure you and testify, your life will never be the same again. Shalom.
